A person shall not be guilty of or liable to be punished for a crime unless—

- (a) the crime is defined by this Code or any other enactment; and
- (b) the person committed the crime or was a party to its commission as provided in this Code or in the enactment concerned; and
- (c) his or her liability is based upon voluntary conduct; and
- (d) subject to subsection (5) of section seventeen, the person engaged in the conduct constituting the crime with any of the blameworthy states of mind referred to in sections thirteen to sixteen, as this Code or any other enactment may require; and
- (e) his or her liability is based upon unlawful conduct, that is, upon conduct for which there is no lawful excuse affording that person a complete defence to the criminal charge, whether in terms of Chapter XIV or otherwise.

10 Criminal conduct may consist of acts or omissions

- (1) Criminal conduct may consist of either an act or an omission.

(2) A person shall not be held criminally liable for an omission nor shall he or she be guilty of the crime to which the omission relates unless—

- (a) the crime for which the person is held liable is defined in such a way as to render criminal his or her failure to act; or
- (b) the person had a legal duty to act positively arising from—
 - (i) the existence of a protective or family relationship between himself or herself and another person which required him or her to protect the life, safety or any legal interest of that other person; or
 - (ii) the creation by the person's prior conduct of a situation in which another person's life, safety or legal interest was or might be endangered; or
 - (iii) his or her assuming control, by contract or otherwise, over a situation, whether brought about by him or her or not, in which another person's life, safety or legal interest was or might be endangered; or
 - (iv) his or her holding a public or like office.

11 Causation

(1) A person shall not be held criminally liable for a consequence unless the person's conduct caused or substantially contributed to its occurrence.

(2) A person's conduct shall be deemed to have caused or substantially contributed to a consequence for the purposes of subsection (1) if the conduct—

- (a) is the factual cause of the consequence, that is, but for the conduct the consequence would not have occurred; and
- (b) is the legal cause of the consequence, that is, the consequence—
 - (i) was a reasonably foreseeable consequence of his or her conduct; or
 - (ii) was brought about by a new cause supervening after his or her conduct, which cause was itself a reasonably foreseeable consequence of his or her conduct.

STATES OF MIND

12 Meaning of subjective state of mind

For the purposes of this Part, a subjective test for a state of mind is a test whereby a court decides whether or not the person concerned actually possessed that state of mind at the relevant time, taking into account all relevant factors that may have influenced that person's state of mind.

13 Intention

(1) Where intention is an element of any crime, the test is subjective and is whether or not the person whose conduct is in issue intended to engage in the conduct or produce the consequence he or she did.

(2) Except as may be expressly provided in this Code or in the enactment concerned, the motive or underlying reason for a person's doing or omitting to do any thing, or forming any intention, is immaterial to that person's criminal liability in terms of this Code or any other enactment.

14 Knowledge

Where knowledge is an element of any crime, the test is subjective and is whether or not the person whose conduct is in issue had knowledge of the relevant fact or circumstance.

15 Realisation of real risk or possibility

(1) Where realisation of a real risk or possibility is an element of any crime, the test is subjective and consists of the following two components—

- (a) a component of awareness, that is, whether or not the person whose conduct is in issue realised that there was a risk or possibility, other than a remote risk or possibility, that—
 - (i) his or her conduct might give rise to the relevant consequence; or
 - (ii) the relevant fact or circumstance existed when he or she engaged in the conduct;

and

- (b) a component of recklessness, that is, whether, despite realising the risk or possibility referred to in paragraph (a), the person whose conduct is in issue continued to engage in that conduct.

(2) If a crime of which the realisation of a real risk or possibility is an element is so defined in this Code or any other enactment that—

- (a) the words describing the component of awareness are omitted, the component of awareness shall be implicit in the word “recklessly” or any derivatives of that word; or
- (b) the words describing the component of recklessness are omitted, the component of recklessness shall be implicit in the expression “realise a real risk or possibility” or any derivatives of that expression.

(3) Where, in a prosecution of a crime of which the realisation of a real risk or possibility is an element, the component of awareness is proved, the component of recklessness shall be inferred from the fact that—

- (a) the relevant consequence actually ensued from the conduct of the accused; or
- (b) the relevant fact or circumstance actually existed when the accused engaged in the conduct;

as the case may be.

(4) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that the test for realisation of a real risk or possibility supersedes the common-law test for constructive or legal intention and its components of foresight of a possibility and recklessness wherever that test was formerly applicable.

16 Negligence

(1) Where negligence is an element of any crime—

- (a) constituted by the performance of an act, the test is objective and consists of the inquiry whether the accused person’s performance of that act was blameworthy in that—
 - (i) a reasonable person in the same circumstances as the accused would not have performed that act; or

- (ii) the accused failed to perform the act with the care and skill with which a reasonable person in the same circumstances would have performed that act; whichever inquiry is appropriate to the crime in question; or
 - (b) constituted by the omission to perform an act, the test is objective and consists of the inquiry whether the accused person’s omission to perform that act was blameworthy in that a reasonable person in the same circumstances would not have omitted to perform the act; or
 - (c) constituted wholly or partly by a consequence resulting from the conduct of an accused person, or by the existence or absence of any circumstance in which such conduct occurred, the test is objective and falls into two parts—
 - (i) whether or not the accused person failed to realise that his or her conduct might produce the relevant consequence or that the relevant circumstance might exist or be absent; and
 - (ii) if the accused person did fail as provided in subparagraph (i), whether or not the person’s failure was blameworthy in that a reasonable person in the same circumstances—
 - A. would have realised that the relevant consequence might be produced and would have guarded against it; or
 - B. would have foreseen that the relevant fact or circumstance might exist or be absent and would have taken steps to ascertain whether or not it did exist;
- as the case may be.

(2) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that paragraph (c) of subsection (1) shall apply to the determination of the criminal liability of any person accused of culpable homicide, negligently causing serious bodily harm or negligently causing serious damage to property.

17 References or absence of references to states of mind in statutory crimes

(1) In this section—

“mental element”, in relation to a crime, means any intention, knowledge, realisation of a real risk or possibility, or negligence with which that crime is committed;

“strict liability crime” means a crime for the commission of which no mental element is required to be proved in order to establish liability for that crime.

(2) Where in any enactment creating a crime—

(a) the word “corruptly”, “deliberately”, “dishonestly”, “fraudulently”, “indecently”, “intend”, “intentionally”, “maliciously”, “mischievously”, “purposely”, “wantonly” or “wilfully”, or phrase “with intent to” or “for the purpose of” or any related or derivative expression is used with respect to the commission by any person of the crime, section thirteen or (subject to subsection (3) of this section) section fifteen shall apply to the determination of the state of mind of the person accused of committing that crime;

(b) the word “knowing”, “knowingly” or any related or derivative expression is used with respect to the commission by any person of the crime, section fourteen or (subject to subsection (3) of this section) section fifteen shall apply to the determination of the state of mind of the person accused of committing it;

- (c) the word “recklessly” or any related or derivative expression is used with respect to the commission by any person of the crime, section fifteen shall apply to the determination of the state of mind of the person accused of committing it;
- (d) the word “negligently”, “carelessly”, “unskillfully” or any related or derivative expression is used with respect to the commission by any person of the crime, section sixteen shall apply to the determination of the state of mind of the person accused of committing it.

(3) The test for realisation of a real risk or possibility contained in section fifteen shall only apply to a crime referred to in paragraph (a) or (b) of subsection (2)—

- (a) if proof of intention as required by section thirteen or proof of knowledge as required by section fourteen is absent; and
- (b) if the crime is of a kind described in paragraph (a) or (b) of subsection (4).

(4) The kinds of crime to which the test for realisation of a real risk or possibility contained in section fifteen can be applied are the following—

- (a) a crime that is constituted not only by the conduct of the person accused of committing it but also by a consequence or potential consequence resulting from the conduct, in which event the test is applicable for the purpose of determining whether the accused realised that there was a real risk or possibility that the consequence might ensue; or
- (b) a crime that is constituted not only by the conduct of the person accused of committing it but also by the existence or absence of any circumstance in which such conduct occurred, in which event the test is applicable for the purpose of determining whether the accused realised that there was a real risk or possibility that the circumstance existed or was absent.

(5) Where in any enactment creating a crime no expression specifying a state of mind is used with respect to the commission of that crime, section thirteen or fourteen, as may be appropriate to the crime in question, and (subject to subsection (3) of this section) section fifteen shall apply to the determination of the state of mind of the person accused of that crime, unless—

- (a) the enactment expressly provides that the crime is a strict liability crime; or
- (b) the legislature impliedly intended it to be a strict liability crime because—
 - (i) the requirement of proving a mental element would render the detection or prosecution of the crime impossible or practically impossible; or
 - (ii) the object of the enactment would be defeated if proof of a mental element is required to establish liability for the crime:

Provided that, notwithstanding subparagraph (i) or (ii), a court shall not hold that the legislature impliedly intended a crime to be a strict liability crime if the penalty for it is mandatory imprisonment or imprisonment without the option of a fine.

PART IV

PROOF OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY

18 Degree and burden of proof in criminal cases

(1) Subject to subsection (2), no person shall be held to be guilty of a crime in terms of this Code or any other enactment unless each essential element of the crime is proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

(2) Subsection (1) shall not prevent any enactment from imposing upon a person charged with a crime the burden of proving any particular fact or circumstance.

(3) Where this Code or any other enactment imposes upon a person charged with a crime the burden of proving any particular fact or circumstance, the person may discharge the burden by proving that fact or circumstance on a balance of probabilities.

(4) Except where this Code or any other enactment expressly imposes the burden of proof of any particular fact or circumstance upon a person charged with a crime, once there is some evidence before the court which raises a defence to the charge, whether or not the evidence has been introduced by the accused, the burden shall rest upon the prosecution to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defence does not apply:

Provided that where an accused pleads that, at the time of the commission of a crime, he or she was suffering from a mental disorder or defect as defined in section two hundred and twenty-six, or a partial mental disorder or defect as defined in section two hundred and seventeen, or acute mental or emotional stress, the burden shall rest upon the accused to prove, on a balance of probabilities, that he or she was suffering from such mental disorder or defect or acute mental or emotional stress.

CHAPTER IV

CRIMES AGAINST PUBLIC ORDER

35 Interpretation in Chapter IV

47 Murder

- (1) Any person who causes the death of another person—
- (a) intending to kill the other person; or
 - (b) realising that there is a real risk or possibility that his or her conduct may cause death, and continues to engage in that conduct despite the risk or possibility;

shall be guilty of murder.

(2) Subject to section 337 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act [Chapter 9:07], a person convicted of murder shall be sentenced to death unless—

- (a) the convicted person is under the age of eighteen years at the time of the commission of the crime; or
- (b) the court is of the opinion that there are extenuating circumstances; in which event the convicted person shall be liable to imprisonment for life or any shorter period.

(3) A person convicted of attempted murder or of incitement or conspiracy to commit murder shall be liable to be sentenced to death or to imprisonment for life or any shorter period.

48 Infanticide

- (1) Any woman who, within six months of the birth of her child, causes its death—
- (a) intentionally; or
 - (b) by conduct which she realises involves a real risk to the child's life;

at a time when the balance of her mind is disturbed as a result of giving birth to the child, shall be guilty of infanticide and liable to imprisonment for a period not exceeding five years.

(2) Where a woman is charged with the murder of her child committed within six months of the child's birth and it is proved that she caused the child's death at a time when the balance of her mind was disturbed as a result of giving birth to the child, she shall not be found guilty of murder but may be found guilty of infanticide if the evidence establishes that she committed that crime.

(3) For the purposes of this section, in determining whether or not the balance of a woman's mind was disturbed as a result of giving birth to a child, regard shall be taken to any pressure or stress from which she suffered arising out of any one or more of the following circumstances or considerations—

- (a) the effects which the birth had, or which she believed it would have, on her social, financial or marital situation;
- (b) the difficulties which were created, or which she believed would be created, in caring for the child in the social, financial or marital situation in which the child was born;
- (c) the difficulties which she had, or which she believed she would have, in caring for the child due to her inexperience or incapacity;
- (d) any other relevant circumstance or consideration, whether based on the psychological effects on the woman's mind arising from the birth itself, or otherwise.

(4) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that nothing in this section precludes—

- (a) a woman from being charged with the murder of her child and, subject to subsection (2), from being convicted of and punished for that crime; or
- (b) a court from returning a special verdict in terms of section 29 of the Mental Health Act [Chapter 15:12] (No. 15 of 1996) in respect of a woman charged with causing the death of her child.

49 Culpable homicide

Any person who causes the death of another person—

- (a) negligently failing to realise that death may result from his or her conduct; or
- (b) realising that death may result from his or her conduct and negligently failing to guard against that possibility;

shall be guilty of culpable homicide and liable to imprisonment for life or any shorter period or a fine up to or exceeding level fourteen or both.

50 Inciting or assisting suicide

Any person who incites, induces, aids, counsels, procures or provides the means for the suicide or attempted suicide of another person, knowing that the other person intends to commit suicide or realising that there is a real risk or possibility that the other person may commit suicide, shall be guilty of inciting or assisting suicide and liable to a fine up to or exceeding level fourteen, or imprisonment for life or any shorter period, or both such fine and such imprisonment.

51 Time of commencement of life and time of death

(1) For the purposes of this Part, life shall be deemed to have commenced when a newly-born child has breathed, whether or not it has an independent circulation at that time and whether or not it is entirely separated from the body of its mother.

(2) For the purposes of this Part, the time of a person's death shall be deemed to be—

- (a) except in the case referred to in paragraph (b), when there has been an irreversible cessation of the person's heart-lung functions; or

- (b) where the person has been installed on a heart-lung or ventilator machine or other life-support system, when a competent medical practitioner, after carrying out appropriate tests, diagnoses and confirms that brain death has occurred.

52 Accelerating death equivalent to causing it

For the purposes of this Part, a person shall be deemed to have caused the death of another person if he or she accelerates a death that would have occurred as a result of other independent causes.

53 Causing death: guidelines

(1) In deciding whether or not there is a causal link between a person's conduct and the death of another person, a court shall be guided by the following factors in addition to any others that are relevant in the particular case—

- (a) a subsequent event which is abnormal, that is to say, which is unlikely in the light of human experience to follow the conduct, may be regarded as breaking the causal link unless it was planned or anticipated by the person responsible for the conduct;
- (b) where the result of the conduct was to inflict a mortal or serious injury upon the other person, there is normally a causal link between the conduct and the other person's death;
- (c) voluntary conduct on the part of the person who subsequently dies is more likely than involuntary subsequent conduct on the part of that person to break the causal link between the conduct and his or her death;
- (d) it is within the range of ordinary human experience that particular persons may suffer from ailments or physical susceptibilities which make them more liable than other persons to die from assaults or from other unlawful conduct.

(2) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that a person will be held to have caused the death of another person if death results from a failure to discharge a legal duty owed by the first-mentioned person to the second-mentioned person.

54 Mercy killing and removal of persons from life-support systems

(1) Subject to this section, it shall be no defence to a charge of murder, infanticide, culpable homicide or inciting or assisting suicide that—

- (a) the person charged with the crime acted or omitted to act, as the case may be, in order to relieve suffering; or
- (b) the deceased person requested that his or her life should be ended;

but a court may take any such factor into account in deciding upon an appropriate sentence.

(2) The High Court may, on application, order that a person be removed from a heart-lung or ventilator machine or other life-support system, if the court is satisfied, from the evidence of at least one medical practitioner, other than any medical practitioner who has been treating the person, that—

- (a) the person is unconscious and there is no reasonable prospect of his or her regaining consciousness; and
- (b) although the person's brain functions may not have entirely ceased, his or her life is being artificially sustained by the machine or system and there is no reasonable prospect that he or she will ever be able to survive without being on the machine or system.

- (3) An application in terms of subsection (2) may be made—
- (a) by a spouse, brother, sister, parent, guardian, curator or tutor of the person referred to in subsection (2); or
 - (b) by the person in charge of the hospital or other institution in which the person referred to in subsection (2) is being kept.
- (4) In an application in terms of subsection (2), the court—
- (a) may appoint a curator ad litem to represent the interests of the person referred to in subsection (2); and
 - (b) shall ensure that, where practicable, every person who has an interest in the matter has been given notice of the application and has been afforded a reasonable opportunity of being heard therein.
- (5) No criminal liability shall attach to—
- (a) any person who terminates the life of another person pursuant to an order under subsection (2); or
 - (b) an applicant referred to in subsection (3); or
 - (c) the curator ad litem referred to in subsection (4).
- (6) An order granted in terms of subsection (2) shall cease to be valid after eighteen months have elapsed from the date on which it was granted.

55 Killing while disposing of victim's body

- (1) If any person—
- (a) does or omits to do any thing in relation to another person which, if it caused that other person's death, would constitute murder or infanticide; and
 - (b) thinking that by such conduct he or she has killed the other person, disposes or attempts to dispose of the other person's body;

he or she shall be guilty of murder or infanticide, as the case may be, if, when he or she engages in the disposal, the other person is not dead but dies as a result of the disposal or attempted disposal.

(2) Subsection (1) shall apply whether the person concerned formed the intention to dispose of the other person's body before, during or after he or she does or omits to do the thing referred to in paragraph (a) of that subsection.

(3) Nothing in this section shall prevent a person being convicted of culpable homicide or any other crime arising out of the disposal or attempted disposal of another person's body.

56 Error as to identity

The fact that a person charged with murder, infanticide or culpable homicide mistakenly believed that the person whose death he or she caused was someone else, shall not constitute a defence to the charge.

57 Deflected blow in homicide cases

If any person—

- (a) does or omits to do anything in relation to another person which, if it caused that other person's death, would constitute murder, infanticide or culpable homicide; and
- (b) by the conduct referred to in paragraph (a), causes the death of someone other than his or her intended victim;

he or she shall be guilty of the following crimes—

- (i) in respect of the intended victim—
 - A. murder, infanticide or culpable homicide, as the case may be, if the intended victim dies; or
 - B. attempted murder, attempted infanticide or assault, as may be appropriate, if the intended victim does not die;
- and
- (ii) in respect of the person whose death he or she has actually caused—
 - A. murder or infanticide, as the case may be, if he or she realised that his or her conduct involved a real risk or possibility of causing the death of someone other than his intended victim; or
 - B. culpable homicide, if the requisites of that crime are satisfied.

58 Joining in after fatal injury inflicted

If—

- (a) a person does or omits to do anything in relation to another person which, if it caused that other person's death, would constitute murder, infanticide or culpable homicide; and
- (b) before he or she does or omits to do the thing referred to in paragraph (a), and independently of that act or omission, his or her victim has received injuries, whether in a fatal attack or otherwise, which subsequently cause the victim's death;

he or she shall be guilty of—

- (i) murder, infanticide or culpable homicide, as the case may be, if his or her conduct accelerated the death of his or her victim; or
- (ii) attempted murder, attempted infanticide or assault, as may be appropriate, if his or her conduct did not accelerate the death of his or her victim.

98 Engaging in practices commonly associated with witchcraft

(1) Any person who engages in any practice knowing that it is commonly associated with witchcraft shall be guilty of engaging in a practice commonly associated with witchcraft if, having intended thereby to cause harm to any person, such practice inspires in the person against whom it was directed a real fear or belief that harm will occur to that person or any member of his or her family, and be liable to a fine not exceeding level ten or imprisonment for a period not exceeding five years or both.

(2) Spoken or written words shall not in themselves constitute a practice commonly associated with witchcraft for the purpose of this section, unless accompanied by or used in connection with other conduct commonly associated with witchcraft.

(4) A court shall not take judicial notice of any practice that is said to be commonly associated with witchcraft, but any person who, in the opinion of the court, is suitably qualified to do so on account of his or her knowledge, shall be competent to give expert evidence as to whether the practice that forms the subject of a charge under this section is a practice that is commonly associated with witchcraft, whether generally or in the particular area where the practice is alleged to have taken place.

101 Belief in witchcraft to operate in mitigation and not as defence to crimes

It shall not be a defence to murder, assault or any other crime that the accused was actuated by a genuine belief that the victim was a witch or wizard, but a court convicting such person may take such belief into account when imposing sentence upon him or her for the crime.

102 Charges alternative to or concurrent with charges under Part VI of Chapter V

A person accused of engaging in a practice commonly associated with witchcraft, indicating a witch or wizard or employing non-natural means to resolve a crime or delict, involving conduct that is in itself otherwise unlawful—

- (d) believed that the person entitled to own, possess or control the property had more property than he or she needed for his or her own purposes; or
- (e) did not intend to prejudice the person entitled to own, possess or control the property; or
- (f) in the case of a charge of theft or stock theft, intended to return the property to the person entitled to own, possess or control it, having originally taken it with the intention of permanently depriving that person of his or her ownership, possession or control; or
- (g) did not know the identity of the person entitled to own, possess or control the property.

(2) Where a person holds trust property it shall not be a defence to a charge of theft, stock theft or unlawful borrowing or use of the property that the person genuinely but mistakenly believed that the law, in the absence of an express stipulation to the contrary under the terms on which he or she holds the property, allowed him or her to spend, consume or dispose of that property provided that he or she replaced it.

(3) A court may regard the factors referred to in paragraphs (a), (b), (c) and (e) of subsection (1), and subsection (2), as mitigatory when assessing the sentence to be imposed upon a person convicted of theft, stock theft or unauthorised borrowing or use of property.

120 Joint ownership no defence

It shall not be a defence to a charge of theft, stock theft or unauthorised borrowing or use of property that the accused was a co-owner of the property that forms the subject of the charge, whether the co-ownership arises through marriage or a partnership or otherwise, if—

- (a) the taking, dealing with or using of the property was not authorised by any agreement between the accused and his or her co-owner, spouse or partner; and
- (b) in the case of a charge of theft or stock theft, the accused took, dealt with or used the property with the intention of depriving his or her co-owner, spouse or partner permanently of the ownership, possession or control of the property:

Provided that no prosecution shall be instituted against a spouse for stealing or unlawfully borrowing or using property belonging to the other spouse or that forms part of the spouses' joint estate, unless the Attorney-General has authorised such a prosecution.

121 Theft and stock theft continuing crimes

(1) The crime of theft or stock theft continues to be committed by a thief even if the thief subsequently loses possession of the property he or she has stolen.

(2) Regardless of whether a thief remains in possession of the property he or she has stolen—

- (a) he or she may be tried for the theft or stock theft by any court within whose area of jurisdiction he or she possessed the stolen property, even if he or she originally stole the property outside the court's area of jurisdiction or outside Zimbabwe; and
- (b) any person who assists him or her while he or she is in possession of the stolen property may be charged and convicted as an accomplice to the theft or stock theft.

122 Pledge-taking cases

(1) Where a person takes possession or control of property capable of being stolen which is owned, possessed or controlled by another person, intending to hold the property as a pledge or security pending the satisfaction of a debt owed by that other person, he or she shall not be chargeable with theft of the property or stock theft unless he or she intended to deprive the other person permanently of his or her ownership, possession or control of the property, but he or she may be charged with unauthorised borrowing or use of the property.

(2) A person who takes property capable of being stolen, intending to deprive the owner permanently of his or her ownership, contrary to the terms on which the person received possession or control of it from the owner as a pledge or security pending the satisfaction of a debt owed to him or her, shall be chargeable with theft or stock theft, as the case may be.

123 Recent possession of stolen property

(1) Subject to subsection (2), where a person is found in possession of property that has recently been stolen and the circumstances of the person's possession are such that he or she may reasonably be expected to give an explanation for his or her possession, a court may infer that the person is guilty of either the theft of the property or stock theft, or of receiving it knowing it to have been stolen, whichever crime is the more appropriate on the evidence, if the person—

- (a) cannot explain his or her possession; or
- (b) gives an explanation of his or her possession which is false or unreasonable.

(2) A court shall not draw the inference referred to in subsection (1) unless the circumstances of the person's possession of the property are such that, in the absence of an explanation from him or her, the only reasonable inference is that he or she is guilty of theft, stock theft or receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen, as the case may be.

Division C: Receiving or possessing stolen property

124 Receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen

(1) Any person who takes possession of stolen property—

(a) knowing that it has been stolen; or

(b) realising that there is a real risk or possibility that it has been stolen;

shall be guilty of receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen, and liable to—

(i) a fine not exceeding level fourteen or not exceeding twice the value of the property which forms the subject of the charge, whichever is the greater; or

(ii) imprisonment for a period not exceeding twenty-five years;

or both.

(2) If it is proved in a prosecution for receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen that, at the time the accused took possession of the property, he or she did not know that it had been stolen or did not realise that there was a real risk or possibility that it had been stolen, but acquired such knowledge or came to such a realisation afterwards, he or she may be convicted of theft or stock theft or of being found in possession of property reasonably suspected of being stolen, if the facts support such a conviction.

125 Possessing property reasonably suspected of being stolen

If any person—

(a) is or has been in possession of property capable of being stolen and the circumstances of his or her possession are such as to give rise, either at the time of his or her possession or at any time thereafter, to a reasonable suspicion that when he or she came into possession of the property it was stolen; and

(b) is unable at any time to give a satisfactory explanation for his or her possession of the property;

the person shall be guilty of possessing property reasonably suspected of being stolen, and liable to—

(i) a fine not exceeding level ten or not exceeding twice the value of the property which forms the subject of the charge, whichever is the greater; or

(ii) imprisonment for a period not exceeding five years;

or both.

Division D: Robbery

(1) Any person who steals or does any act constituting the crime of unauthorised borrowing or use of property shall be guilty of robbery if he or she intentionally uses violence or the threat of immediate violence—

- (a) immediately before or at the time he or she takes the property, in order to induce the person who has lawful control over the property to relinquish his or her control over it; or
 - (b) immediately after he or she takes the property, in order to prevent the person who had lawful control over the property from recovering his or her control over it.
- (2) A person convicted of robbery shall be liable—
- (a) to imprisonment for life or any shorter period, if the crime was committed in aggravating circumstances as provided in subsection (3); or

 - (ii) to imprisonment for a period not exceeding fifty years;

Provided that a court may suspend the whole or any part of a sentence of imprisonment imposed for robbery on condition that the convicted person restores any property stolen by him or her to the person deprived of it or compensates such person for its loss.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2), robbery is committed in aggravating circumstances if the convicted person or an accomplice of the convicted person —

- (a) possessed a firearm or a dangerous weapon; or
- (b) inflicted or threatened to inflict serious bodily injury upon any person; or
- (c) killed a person;

on the occasion on which the crime was committed.

127 Robbery where complainant abandons control over property

It shall not be a defence to a charge of robbery that, when the accused took possession or control over the property, the person who had lawful control over it was no longer exercising such control, if—

- (a) when the accused first used violence or the threat of violence, that other person was in control of the property; and
- (b) the effect of the violence or threat of violence was to render that other person unconscious or to cause him or her to run away or abandon the property or otherwise to render him or her incapable of exercising control over it.

128 Defences to charge of robbery

A person accused of robbery shall be entitled to rely upon any defence that would have been available to the accused if he or she had been accused of theft of the property concerned.

129 Threat of future violence

(1) The taking, dealing with, using or keeping of property by means of a threat of violence shall not constitute robbery unless the threat is of immediate violence, that is to say, is a threat that violence will be used immediately if control over the property is not surrendered.

(2) Nothing in this section shall prevent a person who uses a threat of future violence to obtain control over property from being charged with extortion.

It shall not be a defence to a charge of threatening, incitement, conspiracy or attempting to commit a crime that the accused believed, due to a mistake of fact, that it was physically possible to commit the crime which was the subject of the threat, incitement, conspiracy or attempt, whereas in fact its commission was physically impossible.

- (1) If a person who is—

Provided that a person charged with incitement, conspiracy or attempting to commit a particular crime shall be guilty of incitement, conspiracy or attempting to commit a lesser crime where he or she is entitled to rely on a partial defence which would render a person charged with committing that particular crime guilty of the lesser crime.

This Chapter shall not affect the liability of a person to be convicted of the crime of treason or any other crime which is committed through incitement, conspiracy, any unlawful agreement, or an attempt, or of which incitement, conspiracy, any unlawful agreement or an attempt is an element.

CHAPTER XIII

PARTICIPATION OR ASSISTANCE IN THE COMMISSION OF CRIMES

PART I

PARTICIPATION OR ASSISTANCE BEFORE OR DURING COMMISSION OF CRIMES: CO-PERPETRATORS AND ACCOMPLICES

195 Interpretation in Part I of Chapter XIII

In this Part—

“accomplice” means a person, other than an actual perpetrator of a crime—

- (a) who incites or conspires with an actual perpetrator to commit a crime, with the result that a crime is subsequently committed; or
- (b) who, having authority, whether lawful or otherwise, over an actual perpetrator and—
 - (i) knowing that an actual perpetrator intends to commit a crime; or
 - (ii) realising that there is a real risk or possibility that an actual perpetrator intends to commit a crime;
 - authorises the actual perpetrator to commit the crime; or
- (c) who—
 - (i) knowing that an actual perpetrator intends to commit a crime; or

- (ii) realising that there is a real risk or possibility that an actual perpetrator intends to commit a crime;

renders to the actual perpetrator any form of assistance which enables, assists or encourages the actual perpetrator to commit the crime;

“actual perpetrator”, in relation to a crime, means a person who, with the requisite state of mind actually does, completes or omits to do anything the doing, completion or omission of which constitutes that crime;

“co-perpetrator” means a person referred to in subsection (1) of section one hundred and ninety-six.

196 Liability of co-perpetrators

(1) Subject to this section, where—

- (a) two or more persons knowingly associate with each other with the intention that each or any of them shall commit or be prepared to commit any crime; and
- (b) any one of the persons referred to in paragraph (a) (“the actual perpetrator”) commits the crime; and
- (c) any one of the persons referred to in paragraph (a) other than the actual perpetrator (“the co-perpetrator”) is present with the actual perpetrator during the commission of the crime;

the conduct of the actual perpetrator shall be deemed also to be the conduct of every co-perpetrator, whether or not the conduct of the co-perpetrator contributed directly in any way to the commission of the crime by the actual perpetrator.

(2) If the State has established that two or more accused persons—

- (a) were associated together in any conduct that is preparatory to the conduct which resulted in the crime for which they are charged; or
- (b) engaged in any criminal behaviour as a team or group prior to the conduct which resulted in the crime for which they are charged; and that they were present at or in the immediate vicinity of the scene of the crime in circumstances which implicate them directly or indirectly in the commission of that crime, then it shall be presumed, unless the contrary is shown, that—

- (c) they knowingly associated with each other for a criminal purpose; and
- (d) the crime actually committed—
 - (i) was the crime for the commission of which they associated with each other; or
 - (ii) was, if not the specific crime for the commission of which they associated with each other, a crime whose commission they realised was a real risk or possibility.

(3) If any accused person referred to in subsection (2) who is not the actual perpetrator of the crime—

- (a) does not discharge the burden mentioned in subparagraph (i) or (ii) of paragraph (d) of subsection (2), his or her liability as the co-perpetrator of the crime shall not differ in any respect from the liability of the actual perpetrator, unless he or she satisfies the court that there are special circumstances peculiar to him or her or to the case (which circumstances shall be recorded by the court) why the same penalty as that imposed on the actual perpetrator should not be imposed on him or her; or

- (b) discharges the burden mentioned in subparagraphs (i) and (ii) of paragraph (b) of subsection (2), he or she shall be found guilty of assisting the actual perpetrator of the crime as an accomplice or accessory.

(4) Where there is a dispute between or among two or more accused persons referred to in subsection (1) as to the identity of the actual perpetrator (which dispute cannot be resolved by reference to the evidence that is available to the State) the burden of proving that any particular accused person did not actually perpetrate the crime shall rest with that person.

(5) If any of the accused persons referred to in subsection (4) fails to discharge the burden there referred to and the actual perpetrator is not identified, the accused person or persons concerned shall be liable for punishment as if he or she or each of them was the actual perpetrator.

(6) It shall not be necessary to prove that there was a prior conspiracy to commit the crime for the commission of which a person is associated with another person or other persons in order for a court to find that any person is liable as a co-perpetrator of any crime.

(7) A person charged with being a co-perpetrator of crime may be found guilty of assisting the actual perpetrator of the crime as an accomplice or accessory if such are the facts proved.

(8) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that this section may not be used to convict a co-perpetrator of murder unless he or she was present with the actual perpetrator while the victim was still alive and before a mortal wound or mortal wounds had been inflicted.

197 Liability of accomplices

(1) Subject to this Part, an accomplice shall be guilty of the same crime as that committed by the actual perpetrator whom the accomplice incited, conspired with or authorised or to whom the accomplice rendered assistance.

(2) An accomplice may be found guilty of the crime committed by the actual perpetrator whom the accomplice incited, conspired with or authorised or to whom the accomplice rendered assistance, even if—

- (a) the accomplice lacks the ability or capacity to commit the crime himself or herself; or
- (b) the accomplice is only aware of the fact that the conduct of the actual perpetrator is unlawful but unaware of the nature of the crime being committed or to be committed by the perpetrator or the manner in which it is committed; or
- (c) the actual perpetrator is unaware of any assistance rendered by the accomplice.

(3) Where a person does or omits to do anything which would make him or her an accomplice to the commission of a crime by another person, but for the fact that the other person is entitled to rely upon a defence which excuses that other person from liability or reduces that other person's liability for the crime concerned—

- (a) the first-mentioned person shall be liable as an accomplice in terms of subsection (1) as if the other person were an actual perpetrator; and
- (b) the first-mentioned person shall not be entitled to rely upon that defence unless he or she would be entitled to rely upon it if he or she were charged as an actual perpetrator of the crime concerned.

198 Types of assistance to which accomplice liability applies

Without limiting the expression, any of the following forms of assistance, when given to an actual perpetrator of a crime, shall render the assister an accomplice—

- (a) supplying the means to commit the crime; or
- (b) supplying transport to enable the actual perpetrator to reach the scene of the crime; or
- (c) supplying information to enable the actual perpetrator to locate or identify his or her victim or to acquire knowledge of the place where the crime is to be committed; or
- (d) making premises of which the assister is the owner or occupier available for the commission of the crime; or
- (e) holding oneself available to give assistance in the commission of the crime, in the event of such assistance being required; or
- (f) immobilising or incapacitating the victim of the crime to enable the crime to be committed; or
- (g) carrying implements or other things by which or with the aid of which the crime is committed; or
- (h) keeping watch for or guarding against intervention or discovery while the crime is being committed.

199 Liability of accomplice for further crimes committed by actual perpetrator

Where an actual perpetrator commits a crime that is different from or additional to the crime intended by the accomplice when the accomplice incited, conspired with, authorised or assisted the actual perpetrator, the accomplice shall be guilty of that different or additional crime if, when the accomplice incited, conspired with, authorised or assisted the actual perpetrator, the accomplice realised that there was a real risk or possibility that the actual perpetrator might commit the different or additional crime.

200 Withdrawal from crime by accomplice

An accomplice shall not be guilty of a crime committed by an actual perpetrator if, before the crime has been committed, the accomplice voluntarily desists from further incitement of, conspiracy with, or authorisation or assistance to the actual perpetrator and either—

- (a) renders wholly ineffective his or her previous incitement, conspiracy, authorisation or assistance; or
- (b) gives warning of the crime to a police officer or other person with authority to prevent the commission of the crime, in sufficient time to enable the police officer or other person to prevent its commission.

201 Accomplice liability for extra- territorial acts and crimes

Where a crime is committed—

- (a) inside Zimbabwe; or
- (b) outside Zimbabwe in the case of a crime constituted by extra-territorial acts or omissions;

and any person does or omits to do anything outside Zimbabwe which, if done or omitted in Zimbabwe would render the person an accomplice to that crime, such person may be charged in Zimbabwe as an accomplice to that crime.

202 Punishment of accomplices

Subject to this Code and any other enactment, a person who is convicted of a crime as an accomplice shall be liable to the same punishment to which he or she would be liable had he or she been an actual perpetrator of the crime concerned.

203 Presumptions, jurisdiction, powers and defences applicable to actual perpetrators applicable also to accomplices

- (1) Subject to this Part, any—
- (a) presumption that applies; or
 - (b) jurisdiction that may be exercised; or
 - (c) award or order that may be made; or
 - (d) power to enter, inspect, arrest, search, detain, seize or eject that may be exercised; or
 - (e) power to take a deposit by way of a penalty that may be exercised;

in relation to the actual perpetrator of any crime or suspected crime in terms of this Code or any other enactment, shall be equally applicable or capable of being exercised or made, as the case may be, in relation to an accomplice to the commission of the crime or suspected crime concerned.

(2) Subject to this Code and any other enactment, a person charged as an accomplice may raise and rely on any defence which he or she could have raised and relied on if he or she had been charged as an actual perpetrator of the crime concerned, to the extent that the defence relates to or is based on any fact or circumstance which is an essential element of the crime as committed by both the actual perpetrator and an accomplice:

Provided that a person charged as an accomplice shall be guilty of being an accomplice to a lesser crime where he or she is entitled to rely on a partial defence which would render a person charged with committing that particular crime guilty of the lesser crime.

204 Where accomplice liability is concurrent or does not apply

This Part shall not affect the liability of any person—

- (a) in terms of section fifty-eight or any other provision of this Code or in terms of any other enactment relating to participation in crimes; or
- (b) to be convicted of the crime of treason or any other crime which is committed through incitement, conspiracy, authorisation or assistance, or of which incitement, conspiracy, authorisation or assistance is an element;
- (c) to be convicted as an actual perpetrator of the crime of theft or any other continuing crime.

205 Interpretation in Part II of Chapter XIII

In this Part—

“accessory”, in relation to a crime, means a person who renders assistance to the actual perpetrator of the crime after it has been committed.

206 Assistance after commission of crime

Any person, other than an actual perpetrator of a crime, who—

- (a) knowing that an actual perpetrator has committed a crime; or
- (b) realising that there is a real risk or possibility that an actual perpetrator has committed a crime;

renders to the actual perpetrator any assistance which enables the actual perpetrator to conceal the crime or to evade justice or which in any other way associates the person rendering the assistance with the crime after it has been committed, shall be guilty of being an accessory to the crime concerned.

207 Unavailable defences for accessories

(1) A person may be found guilty as an accessory to a crime even if—

- (a) the person lacks capacity to commit the crime committed by the actual perpetrator; or
- (b) the person is only aware of the fact that the conduct of the actual perpetrator is unlawful but unaware of the nature of the crime committed by the actual perpetrator or the manner in which it was committed; or
- (c) the actual perpetrator is unaware of any assistance rendered by the person; or
- (d) the assistance the person renders does not in fact enable the actual perpetrator to conceal the crime or to evade justice.

(2) Where a person renders assistance to another person in circumstances which would make him or her guilty as an accessory to a crime, but for the fact that the person to whom he or she renders assistance is entitled to rely upon a defence which excuses that other person from liability or reduces that other person’s liability for the crime concerned—

- (a) the first-mentioned person shall be guilty as an accessory to a crime as if the person to whom he or she renders assistance were an actual perpetrator; and
- (b) the first-mentioned person shall not be entitled to rely upon that defence unless he or she would be entitled to rely upon it if he himself or she herself were charged as an actual perpetrator of the crime concerned.

208 Types of assistance to which accessory liability applies

Without limiting the expression, any of the following forms of assistance, when given to an actual perpetrator of a crime, shall render a person liable as an accessory to the crime in terms of this Part—

- (a) concealing, sheltering or feeding the actual perpetrator to enable the actual perpetrator to escape apprehension;

- (b) driving or providing transport to enable the actual perpetrator to escape apprehension;
- (c) destroying or concealing evidence of the commission of the crime;
- (d) giving false information to a police officer or other person in authority concerning the circumstances of the crime or the whereabouts of the actual perpetrator.

209 Accessory liability for extra-territorial acts and crimes

Where a crime is committed—

- (a) inside Zimbabwe; or
- (b) outside Zimbabwe in the case of a crime constituted by extra-territorial acts or omissions;

and any person renders any assistance outside Zimbabwe to the actual perpetrator of the crime which, if rendered in Zimbabwe, would make the person liable as an accessory to that crime, such person may be charged in Zimbabwe as an accessory to that crime.

210 Punishment of accessories

A person who is convicted as an accessory to a crime shall be liable to the same punishment to which he or she would have been liable had he or she been convicted of the crime committed by the actual perpetrator to whom he or she rendered assistance.

211 Presumptions, jurisdiction, powers and defences applicable to actual perpetrators applicable also to accessories

- (1) Subject to this Part, any—
 - (a) presumption that applies; or
 - (b) jurisdiction that may that may be exercised; or
 - (c) award or order that may be made; or
 - (d) power to enter, inspect, arrest, search, detain, seize or eject that may be exercised; or
 - (e) power to take a deposit by way of a penalty that may be exercised;

in relation to the actual perpetrator of any crime or suspected crime in terms of this Code or any other enactment, shall be equally applicable or capable of being exercised or made, as the case may be, in relation to an accessory.

(2) Subject to this Code and any other enactment, a person charged as an accessory may raise and rely on any defence which he or she could have raised and relied on if he or she had been charged as an actual perpetrator of the crime concerned, to the extent that the defence relates to or is based on any fact or circumstance which is an essential element of the crime as committed by both the actual perpetrator and an accessory:

Provided that a person charged as an accessory shall be guilty of being an accessory to a lesser crime where he or she is entitled to rely on a partial defence which would render a person charged with committing that particular crime guilty of the lesser crime.

212 Where accessory liability is concurrent or does not apply

This Part shall not affect the liability of any person—

- (a) in terms of section fifty-eight or any other provision of this Code or in terms of any other enactment relating to the rendering of assistance to offenders;

- (b) to be convicted of the crime of treason or any other crime which is committed through the rendering of assistance or failure to report the crime, or of which the rendering of assistance or a failure to report is an element;
- (c) to be convicted as an actual perpetrator of the crime of theft or any other continuing crime.

CHAPTER XIV

GENERAL DEFENCES AND MITIGATING FACTORS

PART I

PRELIMINARY

213 Interpretation in Chapter XIV

In this Chapter—

“complete defence” means a defence to a criminal charge which completely absolves the accused from criminal liability;

“partial defence” means a defence to a criminal charge which does not completely absolve the accused from criminal liability but instead renders the accused liable to conviction for a lesser crime.

214 Defences and mitigating factors not limited to those mentioned in Chapter XIV

The defences and mitigating factors which an accused may successfully raise are not limited to those set out in this Chapter.

215 Defence to one crime not necessarily defence to other crimes

The fact that a person has a complete or partial defence in relation to conduct which is an essential element of a particular crime shall not prevent that person from being charged with and convicted of any other crime of which that conduct is not an essential element.

Division A: Defence Relating to Voluntary Conduct

PART II

AUTOMATISM

216 Involuntary conduct

(1) Subject to subsection (3), the fact that the conduct of a person charged with a crime was not voluntary as required by paragraph (c) of section nine, that is, that the person did or omitted to do anything that is an essential element of the crime without conscious knowledge or control, shall be a complete defence to the charge.

(2) Without derogating from the generality of the meaning of “voluntary conduct”, the following do not constitute voluntary conduct—

- (a) a reflex movement, spasm or convulsion;
- (b) a bodily movement during unconsciousness or sleep;

- (c) conduct during hypnosis, or which results from hypnotic suggestion;
- (d) conduct over which a person has no control, his or her body or part of his or her body being merely an instrument in the hands of a human or natural agency outside him or her;

and the expression “involuntary conduct” shall be construed accordingly.

(3) If a situation in which a person’s conduct is involuntary is brought about through the person’s own fault, a court may regard the conduct as voluntary.

(4) If it is found that the conduct of a person upon which he or she is charged with a crime was involuntary, and that such involuntary conduct was the result of a mental disorder or defect as defined in section two hundred and twenty-six, a court shall return a special verdict in terms of section 29 of the Mental Health Act [Chapter 15:12] (Act No. 15 of 1996).

Division B: Defences and Mitigating Factors Relating to the Mental State

PART III

DIMINISHED RESPONSIBILITY

217 Interpretation in Part III of Chapter XIV

In this Part—

“partial mental disorder or defect” means a mental disorder or defect as defined in section two hundred and twenty-six, the effect of which is not such as to entirely deprive the person suffering from it of the capacity to appreciate the nature or lawfulness of his or her conduct or to act in accordance with such an appreciation.

218 Diminished responsibility to operate in mitigation not as defence

- (1) If at the time when a crime is committed the capacity of the person committing it—
- (a) to appreciate the nature of his or her conduct or that his or her conduct was unlawful; or
 - (b) to act in accordance with an appreciation of the kind referred to in paragraph (a);

is diminished on account of acute mental or emotional stress, or a partial mental disorder or defect, such diminished responsibility shall not be a defence to the crime, but a court convicting such person shall take it into account when imposing sentence upon him or her for the crime.

(2) If the acute mental or emotional stress, or partial mental disorder or defect, is brought about through the person’s own fault, a court may regard such person’s responsibility as not having been diminished.

(3) Where the capacity of a person to appreciate the nature or lawfulness of his or her conduct or to act in accordance with such an appreciation is affected by intoxication or provocation, Part IV or IX, as the case may be, shall apply to such person.

(4) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that where a mental disorder or defect is such as to negate rather than diminish the capacity of the person suffering from it to appreciate the nature or lawfulness of his or her conduct or to act in accordance with such an appreciation, the person shall be entitled to a complete defence in terms of section two hundred and twenty-seven.

PART IV
INTOXICATION

219 Interpretation in Part IV of Chapter XIV

In this Part—

“intoxication” means intoxication resulting from the ingestion of any form of alcohol or drug;

“involuntary intoxication” means intoxication that is not voluntarily self-induced;

“voluntary intoxication” means intoxication which is voluntarily self-induced.

220 When involuntary intoxication a complete defence to crimes

(1) The fact that a person charged with a crime was intoxicated when he or she did or omitted to do anything that is an essential element of the crime shall be a complete defence to the charge if—

- (a) the person was involuntarily intoxicated when he or she did or omitted to do anything that is an essential element of the crime; and
- (b) in relation to a crime of which intention, knowledge or the realisation of a real risk or possibility is an element, the person was intoxicated to such an extent that he or she lacked the requisite intention, knowledge or realisation.

(2) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that involuntary intoxication shall be a complete defence to any crime of which negligence is an element.

221 Intoxication no defence to crimes committed with requisite state of mind

(1) If a person charged with a crime requiring proof of intention, knowledge or the realisation of a real risk or possibility—

- (a) was voluntarily or involuntarily intoxicated when he or she did or omitted to do anything which is an essential element of the crime; but
- (b) the effect of the intoxication was not such that he or she lacked the requisite intention, knowledge or realisation;

such intoxication shall not be a defence to the crime, but the court may regard it as mitigatory when assessing the sentence to be imposed.

(2) Where a person is charged with a crime requiring proof of negligence, the fact the person was voluntarily intoxicated when he or she did or omitted to do anything which is an essential element of the crime shall not be a defence to any such crime, nor shall the court regard it as mitigatory when assessing the sentence to be imposed.

222 Voluntary intoxication leading to unlawful conduct

If a person charged with a crime requiring proof of intention, knowledge or the realisation of a real risk or possibility (hereafter in this section called “the crime originally charged”) and it is proved that—

- (a) the accused was voluntarily intoxicated when he or she did or omitted to do anything which is an essential element of the crime originally charged; and
- (b) the effect of the intoxication was such that the accused lacked the requisite intention, knowledge or realisation;

he or she shall be guilty of voluntary intoxication leading to unlawful conduct instead of the crime originally charged and liable to the same punishment as if—

- (i) he or she had been found guilty of the crime originally charged; and
- (ii) intoxication had been assessed as a mitigatory circumstance in his or her case.

223 Intoxication facilitating the commission of crime

- (1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Part, if a person—
 - (a) having formed an intention to commit a crime, becomes voluntarily intoxicated for the purpose of enabling him or her to commit the crime or facilitating his or her commission of the crime; and
 - (b) while so intoxicated, does or omits to do anything which, if done or omitted, as the case may be, with the requisite intention, would be an essential element of a crime;

the person may be convicted of the crime concerned on the basis of his or her original intention, in all respects as if he or she had not been intoxicated when he or she did or omitted to do the thing concerned.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Code, if a person becomes voluntarily intoxicated realising that there is real risk or possibility that he or she will, in his or her intoxicated condition, engage in any conduct for which he or she may be held criminally liable, he or she may be convicted of the crime constituted by the conduct on the basis of his or her original realisation, in all respects as if he or she had not been intoxicated when he or she did or omitted to do the thing concerned.

224 Voluntary intoxication leading to provocation

If a person, while in a state of voluntary intoxication, is provoked into any conduct by something which would not have provoked that person had he or she not been intoxicated, the court shall, in accordance with Part IX, regard such provocation as mitigatory when assessing the sentence.

225 Intoxication leading to mental disorder

If a person, as a result of voluntary or involuntary intoxication, suffers from a permanent or long-lasting disorder or disability of mind, the disorder or disability shall be capable of constituting a defence of mental disorder in terms of Part V to a criminal charge arising out of any conduct on the person's part whilst he or she is suffering from the disorder or disability:

Provided that a verdict that the person was mentally disordered shall not be returned if the person's mind was only temporarily disordered or disabled by the effects of alcohol or a drug.

PART V

MENTAL DISORDER

226 Interpretation in Part V of Chapter XIV

In this Part—

“mental disorder or defect” means mental illness, arrested or incomplete development of mind, psychopathic disorder or any other disorder or disability of the mind.

227 Mental disorder at time of commission of crime

(1) The fact that a person charged with a crime was suffering from a mental disorder or defect when the person did or omitted to do anything which is an essential element of the crime charged shall be a complete defence to the charge if the mental disorder or defect made him or her—

- (a) incapable of appreciating the nature of his or her conduct, or that his or her conduct was unlawful, or both; or
- (b) incapable, notwithstanding that he or she appreciated the nature of his or her conduct, or that his or her conduct was unlawful, or both, of acting in accordance with such an appreciation.

(2) For the purposes of subsection (1), the cause and duration of the mental disorder or defect shall be immaterial.

(3) Subsection (1) shall not apply to a mental disorder or defect which is neither permanent nor long-lasting, suffered by a person as a result of voluntary intoxication as defined in section two hundred and nineteen.

228 Mental disorder at time of trial

The fact that a person is mentally disordered or defective at the time of his or her trial on a criminal charge shall not be a defence to the charge unless he or she was also mentally disordered or defective at the time he or she did or omitted to do anything that is an essential element of the crime charged.

229 Application of Cap. 15:12

Nothing in this Part shall affect the operation of the Mental Health Act [Chapter 15:12] (Act No. 15 of 1996) in relation to—

- (a) the procedure to be followed when persons being tried are found to be mentally disordered or defective or any verdict to be returned at any such trial; or
- (b) the detention, examination or treatment of persons found to be mentally disordered or defective.

PART VI

MINORITY

230 When child between seven and fourteen years may be held criminally liable

(1) The presumption referred to in section seven as to the criminal incapacity of a child between the age of seven and below the age of fourteen years may be rebutted if, at the time of the commission of the crime for which such child is charged, the child was sufficiently mature—

- (a) to understand that his or her conduct was unlawful or morally wrong; and
- (b) to be capable of conforming with the requirements of the law.

(2) Subsection (1) shall apply to all crimes, whether or not any form of intention, knowledge, realisation or negligence is required for their commission.

(3) In deciding, for the purposes of subsection (1), whether or not a child was sufficiently mature to have the understanding and capacity referred to in that subsection, a court shall take into account the following factors, in addition to any others that are relevant in the particular case—

- (a) the nature of the crime with which the child is charged; and
- (b) the child's general maturity and family background; and
- (c) the child's knowledge, education and experience; and
- (d) the child's behaviour before, during and after the conduct which forms the subject of the charge.

(4) Where a child who is of or over the age of seven years but under the age of fourteen years does or omits to do anything in the presence of an older person whom in all the circumstances the child would be expected to obey, it shall be presumed, in any criminal proceedings arising out of that conduct, that the child was acting under compulsion from that older person, unless the contrary is proved.

(5) For the purposes of subsection (4), a child shall be deemed to be in the presence of an older person if the older person is so placed as to be able to control the child's conduct.

231 Attorney-General to authorise prosecutions of children under fourteen years

No proceedings in respect of any crime shall be instituted or continued against any person who is under the age of fourteen years, other than proceedings for the purposes of remand, without the authority of the Attorney-General.

PART VII

MISTAKE OR IGNORANCE OF FACT

232 Interpretation in Part VII of Chapter XIV

In this Part—

“essential fact”, in relation to a crime, means any fact or factual circumstance which relates to an essential element of the crime;

“ignorance”, in relation to a fact, means complete lack of knowledge that the fact exists;

“mistake”, in relation to a fact, means an erroneous impression concerning that fact.

233 When mistake or ignorance of fact a defence to subjective crimes

(1) If a person does or omits to do anything which would be an essential element of a crime if done or omitted, as the case may be, with any form of intention, knowledge or realisation, the person shall have a complete defence to a charge of committing that crime if, when he or she did or omitted to do the thing, he or she was genuinely mistaken or ignorant as to an essential fact of the crime concerned.

(2) Subject to this Code and any other enactment, mistake or ignorance of an essential fact may be a defence to a crime referred to in subsection (1) even if it is not reasonable:

Provided that the reasonableness or unreasonableness of any mistake or ignorance may be taken into account in determining whether or not it is genuine.

234 When mistake or ignorance of fact a defence to objective crimes

If a person does or omits to do anything which would be an essential element of a crime if done or omitted, as the case may be, negligently, the person shall have a complete defence to a charge of committing that crime if—

- (a) when he or she did or omitted to do the thing, he or she was genuinely mistaken or ignorant as to an essential fact of the crime concerned; and
- (b) the person's mistake or ignorance of that essential fact was reasonable in all the circumstances.

PART VIII

MISTAKE OR IGNORANCE OF LAW

235 Interpretation in Part VIII of Chapter XIV

In this Part—

“ignorance”, in relation to a law, means complete lack of knowledge that the law exists;

“law” means this Code or any other enactment;

“mistake”, in relation to a law, means an erroneous impression as to the nature or contents of that law.

236 When mistake or ignorance of law a defence

(1) Subject to this Part, if a person—

- (a) does or omits to do anything which is an essential element of a crime in terms of any law; and
- (b) when he or she did or omitted to do the thing, he or she did not know that his or her conduct was unlawful because he or she was genuinely mistaken or ignorant as to the relevant provisions of the law;

the person shall not have a complete defence to a charge of committing that crime unless the person's mistake or ignorance as to the relevant provisions of the law was directly brought about by advice given to him or her by an administrative or judicial officer whom he or she had reason to believe was charged with the administration of the law concerned and was familiar with its contents.

(2) In any circumstances other than those affording a complete defence under subsection (1), genuine mistake or ignorance as to the relevant provisions of a law on the part of a person charged with a crime shall merely be a factor to be taken into account in the assessment of sentence.

237 Claims of right and mistakes of mixed law and fact

If in any criminal case a person charged with any crime against property raises a defence of claim of right, namely that the person believed he or she had a right to do or omit to do any thing, the court shall determine whether or not the belief arose from mistake or ignorance of fact or law and, if the court decides that the belief arose—

- (a) solely from mistake or ignorance of law, the court shall regard the defence as one of mistake or ignorance of law in terms of this Part; or

- (b) solely from mistake or ignorance of fact, the court shall regard the defence as one of mistake or ignorance of fact in terms of Part VII; or
- (c) partly from mistake or ignorance of law and partly from mistake or ignorance of fact, the court shall regard the defence as one of mistake or ignorance of law in terms of this Part.

PART IX

PROVOCATION

238 Provocation in relation to crimes other than murder

Except as provided in section two hundred and thirty-nine and subject to any other enactment, provocation shall not be a defence to a crime but the court may regard it as mitigatory when assessing the sentence to be imposed for the crime.

239 When provocation a partial defence to murder

(1) If, after being provoked, a person does or omits to do anything which would be an essential element of the crime of murder if done or omitted, as the case may be, with the intention or realisation referred to in section forty-seven, the person shall be guilty of culpable homicide if, as a result of the provocation—

- (a) he or she does not have the intention or realisation referred to in section forty-seven; or
- (b) he or she has the intention or realisation referred to in section forty-seven but has completely lost his or her self-control, the provocation being sufficient to make a reasonable person in his or her position and circumstances lose his or her self-control.

(2) For the avoidance of doubt it is declared that if a court finds that a person accused of murder was provoked but that—

- (a) he or she did have the intention or realisation referred to in section forty-seven; or
- (b) the provocation was not sufficient to make a reasonable person in the accused's position and circumstances lose his or her self-control;

the accused shall not be entitled to a partial defence in terms of subsection (1) but the court may regard the provocation as mitigatory as provided in section two hundred and thirty-eight.

Division C: Defences and Mitigating Factors Relating to Unlawfulness

AUTHORITY

240 Public authority

(1) Subject to this section, the fact that a person is authorised or permitted by an enactment to do or omit to do any thing shall be a complete defence to a charge alleging the commission of a crime of which that conduct is an essential element.

(2) Subject to this section, the fact that a person did or omitted to do any thing as a duly authorised official, employee or agent of the State and in the proper exercise of that authority shall be a complete defence to a charge alleging the commission of a crime of which that conduct is an essential element.

- (3) A person shall not be entitled to rely on the defence referred to in—
 - (a) subsection (1), unless his or her conduct was in all respects authorised or permitted by the enactment concerned;
 - (b) subsection (2), unless it was lawful for the State to give the authority concerned.

241 Discipline of children

- (1) In this section—

“guardian” means a person, other than a school teacher in his or her capacity as such, who has the lawful custody, charge or care of a minor person, whether permanently or temporarily;

“minor”, in relation to a person, means that the person is under the age of eighteen years;

“school” includes an educational institution of any kind;

“school-teacher” means the head or deputy head of a school.

- (2) Subject to this section—

- (a) a parent or guardian shall have authority to administer moderate corporal punishment for disciplinary purposes upon his or her minor child or ward;
- (b) a school-teacher shall have authority to administer moderate corporal punishment for disciplinary purposes upon any minor male pupil or student;

and, where moderate corporal punishment is administered upon a minor person by a parent, guardian or school-teacher within the scope of that authority, the authority shall be a complete defence to a criminal charge alleging the commission of a crime of which the administration of the punishment is an essential element.

(3) Subject to this section, any person who administers moderate corporal punishment upon a minor person under authority delegated to him or her by a parent, guardian or school-teacher shall have a complete defence to a criminal charge alleging the commission of a crime of which the administration of such punishment is an essential element, if it would have been lawful for the parent, guardian or school-teacher to have administered such punishment himself or herself.

(4) No school-teacher or person acting under authority delegated to him or her by a school-teacher shall administer corporal punishment upon a female pupil or student.

(5) When administering corporal punishment upon a minor male pupil or student at his or her school, a school-teacher shall comply with any lawful rules, regulations or administrative instructions which apply to the administration of corporal punishment at his or her school.

(6) In deciding whether or not any corporal punishment administered upon a minor person is moderate for the purposes of this section, a court shall take into account the following factors, in addition to any others that are relevant in the particular case—

- (a) the nature of the punishment and any instrument used to administer it; and
- (b) the degree of force with which the punishment was administered; and
- (c) the reason for the administration of the punishment; and

- (d) the age, physical condition and sex of the minor person upon whom it was administered; and
- (e) any social attitudes towards the discipline of children which are prevalent in the community among whom the minor person was living when the punishment was administered upon the minor person.

242 Purported corporal punishment of spouses unlawful

It shall not be lawful for a person to purport to administer corporal punishment upon his or her spouse, whatever the nature of their marriage and wherever their marriage may have been contracted.

PART XI

COMPULSION

243 Requirements for compulsion to be complete defence

(1) Subject to this Part, the fact that a person accused of a crime was subjected to compulsion when the person did or omitted to do anything that is an essential element of the crime shall be a complete defence to the charge if—

- (a) the compulsion consisted of a threat—
 - (i) unlawfully to kill him or her or cause him or her serious bodily injury or to kill or cause serious bodily injury to some other person; or
 - (ii) unlawfully to cause him or her financial or proprietary loss;
- and
- (b) he or she believed on reasonable grounds that implementation of the threat referred to in paragraph (a) had begun or was imminent; and
 - (c) the threat referred to in paragraph (a) was not brought about through his or her own fault; and
 - (d) he or she believed on reasonable grounds that he or she could not escape from or resist the threat referred to in paragraph (a) and that his or her conduct was necessary to avert the implementation of the threat; and
 - (e) by his or her conduct he or she did no more harm than was reasonably necessary to avert the implementation of the threat referred to in paragraph (a), and no more harm than was unlawfully threatened.

(2) Where a person voluntarily associates himself or herself with one or more other persons knowing or realising that there is a real risk or possibility that they will involve him or her in the commission of a crime, any threat made against him or her by one or more of those other persons for the purpose of inducing him or her to commit a crime shall be deemed, for the purpose of paragraph (c) of subsection (1), to have been brought about through his or her own fault.

244 Additional requirements for compulsion to be complete defence to murder

(1) Subject to subsection (3), the fact that a person accused of murder was subjected to compulsion when he or she did or omitted to do anything that is an essential element of the crime shall not be a complete defence to the charge unless the following requirements are satisfied in addition to those specified in paragraphs (b), (c) and (d) of subsection (1) of section two hundred and forty-three—

- (a) the compulsion took the form of a threat unlawfully to kill the accused or some other person immediately if the accused did not kill or assist in killing the deceased; and
- (b) the accused could not escape from or resist the threat referred to in paragraph (a); and
- (c) the accused had no warning of the threat referred to in paragraph (a) to enable him or her to forestall it, whether by reporting the matter to the police or by other means.

(2) If the requirements referred to or specified in subsection (1) are satisfied, the defence of compulsion shall be a complete defence to a charge of murder, whether the accused is charged as an actual perpetrator or as an accomplice.

CONSENT

245 Requirements for consent to be complete defence

(1) Subject to this Part, where a person consents to any conduct which is likely to cause harm to his or her person, proprietary rights or other interests, his or her consent shall be a complete defence to a charge against any other person alleging the commission of a crime of which that conduct forms an essential element, if—

- (a) the interests of the community as a whole are not adversely affected by the conduct to any substantial degree; and
- (b) the consent is given prior to the conduct, not as ratification afterwards; and
- (c) the person who gives the consent is—
 - (i) capable in law of giving such consent; and
 - (ii) able to understand the nature and possible consequences of the conduct and to give informed consent thereto;

and

- (d) the consent is real and is not induced by threat, force, fraud or mistake intentionally or knowingly induced by the person charged with the crime; and
- (e) the giving of the consent is not contrary to any law or to public policy.

(2) Where a person is charged with rape, aggravated indecent assault, indecent assault or any other crime constituted by the absence of consent by another person to any conduct, the fact that the other person consented to the conduct shall be a complete defence to a charge alleging the commission of that crime if—

- (a) the consent is given prior to the conduct, not as ratification afterwards; and
- (b) the person who gives the consent is—
 - (i) capable in law of giving such consent; and
 - (ii) able to understand the nature and possible consequences of the conduct and to give informed consent thereto;

and

- (c) the consent is real and is not induced by threats, force, fraud or mistake intentionally or knowingly induced by the person charged with the crime.

246 When consent no defence

It shall not be lawful for any person to consent to—

- (a) being killed; or
- (b) subject to this Part, the infliction of serious bodily injury upon himself or herself; and such consent shall not be a defence to any criminal charge arising out of such killing or the infliction of such injury.

247 Consent to medical treatment for therapeutic purposes

(1) In this section—

“patient” means a person to whom medical treatment is given or upon whom a medical operation is performed;

“qualified person”, in relation to any medical treatment or operation, means a person who, by virtue of his or her qualifications or training, is in all the circumstances qualified to give the medical treatment or perform the medical operation.

(2) Where, in order to cure or alleviate any disease or disability from which a patient suffers or is likely to suffer, a qualified person gives any medical treatment to or performs any medical operation upon a patient—

- (a) with the consent of the patient; or
- (b) if the patient is incapable of giving consent, with the consent of the patient’s parent, guardian, spouse or any other person capable in law of giving consent on behalf of the patient; or
- (c) in the case of a minor to whom section 76 of the Children’s Act [Chapter 5:06] applies, with authority given in terms of that section;

such consent or authority shall be a complete defence to a charge of murder or assault arising out of that treatment or operation if—

- (i) the consent complies with paragraphs (b), (c) and (d) of subsection (1) of section two hundred and forty-five; and
- (ii) the treatment or operation is carried out competently in accordance with recognised medical procedures.

(3) If a qualified person believes on reasonable grounds that—

- (a) a patient urgently requires medical treatment or a medical operation to cure or alleviate any disease or disability from which the patient is suffering or is reasonably suspected of suffering; and
- (b) it is not practicable in the circumstances to obtain the consent or authority required by or referred to in subsection (2);

he or she may give the treatment or perform the operation, as the case may be, without having obtained such consent or authority.

(4) The fact that a qualified person gave treatment or performed an operation in terms of subsection (3) shall be a complete defence to a charge of murder or assault arising out of that treatment or operation if the treatment or operation is carried out competently in accordance with recognised medical procedures.

248 Consent to medical treatment for non-therapeutic purposes

(1) In this section—

“patient” means a person to whom medical treatment is given or upon whom a medical operation is performed;

266 Necessity in relation to other crimes

In relation to all cases other than those specified in this Part, necessity shall not be a defence but shall merely be a factor to be taken into account in the assessment of sentence.

269 When obedience to illegal orders affords complete defence

(1) Subject to this section, the fact that a person charged with a crime was obeying an illegal order when the person did or omitted to do anything that is an essential element of the crime shall not be a complete defence to the charge unless the following requirements are satisfied in addition to those specified in paragraphs (a) and (b) of section two hundred and sixty-eight—

(2) In deciding whether a crime is of a sufficiently trivial nature to justify the acquittal of the person charged in terms of subsection (1), a court shall take into account the following factors in addition to any others that are relevant to the particular case—

- (a) the extent of any harm done by the commission of the crime to any person or to the community as a whole; and
- (b) the extent to which it appears, from the enactment which created the crime, that the lawmaker wished to prohibit conduct such as that perpetrated by the accused; and
- (c) whether or not an acquittal will encourage other persons to commit the crime concerned.

(3) Where a crime is by its nature trivial, that is, where the conduct prohibited by the enactment concerned does little harm either to individual persons or to the community as a whole, a court shall not acquit a person charged with such a crime in terms of this section unless the conduct of the person charged is of a trivial nature in relation to the most serious conduct prohibited by the particular provision of the enactment concerned.
